In December 2021, through a consensus decision aimed at protecting the world from future infectious diseases crises, the World Health Assembly (internal body of World Health Organization) agreed to kickstart a global process to draft and negotiate a convention, agreement or other international instrument under the Constitution of the World Health Organization to strengthen pandemic prevention, preparedness and response.

Ghebreyesus, WHO Director General, said the decision was historic in nature, vital in its mission, and represented a once-in-a-generation opportunity to strengthen the global health architecture, to protect and promote the well-being of all people.

“The COVID-19 pandemic has shone a light on the many flaws in the global system to protect people from pandemics: the most vulnerable people going without vaccines; health workers without needed equipment to perform their life-saving work; and ‘me-first’ approaches that hamper the global solidarity needed to deal with a global threat”.
