This architectural elevation drawing depicts a symmetrical two-story building facade. The central portion is a two-story structure with a gabled roof, finished with a brick pattern. It contains five rectangular windows on the upper floor and five smaller, similar windows on the lower floor, which are integrated into a light-colored stone masonry base. The building is flanked by two single-story wings, also constructed from stone, each featuring a large arched window with a metal grille. Decorative circular motifs are placed on the stone walls between the wings. To the right, a chimney rises from a lower section of the building. The entire drawing is rendered in a clean, technical style with black outlines and color-coded textures for brick and stone.
